Rapid Progress of the Work. The Potomac and Eastern Branch Bridges The Tunnel Other Work La and Gutside the District.

The Battimere and Potomac Railroad is making rapid progress towards completion, and we may expect to hear the whistling of their locomotives in a comparatively short time. This road, besides its important connections north and south, will bring us inte close communion with a productive por lon of Maryland heretofore almost isolated from us by impassible country

THE BRIDGE OVER THE EASTERN BRANCH. now building, crosses that stream diagonally, connecting with the west bank at a point near the government magazine. The piles for that part of the structure through deep water are nearly all driven, and the heavy timbers for stringers are being put in place. stringers are being put in place. On each side of the channel, as far as the flats extend, an earth embankment has been filled in to deep water, and where this embankment stops on each side abutments are to be built and a draw placed for the accommodation of boats. This bridge will be finished so that lacomotives can cross on it by October.
THE ROAD THIS SIDE

makes a curve along the shore, and passes south of the Congressional Cemetery to a point to-tween the Navy Yard bridge and the old bridge east of it, where it enters Virginia avenue through a deep cut in the bank, which extends to the ravine semewhere near 14th street southeast. This is a long and deep cut through coarse gravel and occasional layers of red and brown clay. Some of this clay, when dry, is very hard, and presents the appearance of red chalk. Through this deep cut, extending from the ravine to near the bridge, a wooden track has been laid for how coardinates. laid for horse cars, which are kept busy early and late carrying this gravel to the river filling, ex tending the road in width and length. By means of this temporary railway, one horse can draw as much as eight with the ordinary horse carts. This excavation will soon be completed as far as 12th street east, where

THE TUNNEL commences, on the east side of the street. The entire length of this tunnel is through a vast gravel bank, and great precautions are necessary to prevent the banks from falling in. The work here is necessarily slow, as the dirt has to be carted a long way to be dumped. Other diffi-culties are encountered; the water and gas pipes which supply the navy yard run down Garrison street, and have to be kept in place by shoring up, until means can be taken to sink them under the bettom of the tunnel; the water, too, which the bottom of the tunnel; the water, too, which cozes out of this gravel, accumulates, and has to be drained off. The excavation for the tunnel, however, is nearly complete, only one square (from 8th to 9th, on Virginia avenue,) remaining untouched. The tunnel proper extends from the east side of 12th to the west side of 7th streets east, and the remaining distance, to the market house, where the road comes out to the level of the street, is handsomely walled up on each side with rubble work, finished with a coping of dressed Seneca stone, along which is to be put substantial iron fences.

THE DIRECTION OF THE ROAD

is changed at Garrison street off from Virginia avenue to K street southeast, over which street it passes to the west side of the canal, southwest from the Blagden residence, and follows up the canal to Virginia avenue; little or no grading being necessary after it leaves the tunnel until it crosses over the Long Bridge into Virginia, with the exception of a new feet which has to be taken off on Maryland avenue from 11th to 13th streets, southwest, and filled in near the Long Bridge, to meet the elevated grade there.

CHARACTEE AND COST OF THE TUNNEL WORK. CHARACTER AND COST OF THE TUNNEL WORK. The work commenced on the tunnel the 5th day of July, 1870, and will, in all probability, require another year to complete it. The esti-mated cost is not much less than one and a halfmillions of dollars, from the west entrance of the tunnel to the Eastern Branch. Most of the stone used for arching, and side walls, is brought from the Potomac blue stone quarries, above Georgetown, and floated around on scows to the navy yard bridge, from which point it is hauled to the tunnel. Four heavy derricks are used for lowering the stone to the places in the tunnel, and a perfect net-work of guy-ropes obstruct the way in the vicinity of Garrison street and Virginia avenue, glying a busy appearance to this part of avenue, giving a busy appearance to this part of

A large number of railroad ties are in readiness, piled up on the banks of the Eastern Branch, and the steel rails will soon be coming in for this section of the road. Some of them are already on the ground, and will be laid this Operations at

THE LONG BRIDGE are also progressing as rapidly as possible, considering the difficulties the company have to contend with and the extent of the work to be accomplished. The causeway from the Virginia shore to the abutment is completed, save where an aperture has been left open for the plankway to the water, on the upper side, and on which the heavy stones are unloaded from the boats and rolled to the tan of the causeway which the heavy stones are unloaded from the boats and rolled to the top of the causeway, where they are cut and fitted for their places. This abutment wall of blue stone, laid in hydraulic cement, with the coping of light sandstone, presents a very substantial appearance, and is pronounced a No. 1 job by good judges. Between this abutment and the channel there are four stone piers almost courseleted and he are four stone piers, almost completed, and beare four stone piers, almost completed, and between the channel and the abutment on the south end of the center causeway there are eight piers now being constructed, making twelwe altogether, besides the draw piers at the channel.
These piers are all built upon a foundation of piles of yellow pine, tipped with an iron point, before being driven, to penetrate far below the bed of the river, into a hard gravel bottom.

These logs are brought from According gravel

These logs are brought from Accotink creek, and furnished by Captain Troth. The piers are placed as far as practicable on the sites of the old ones, as the foundations there are thought to be more secure. The work of building one of these piers is very slow and tedious; five rows of piles have to be driven close together, the width of the bridge with a two foot space between each row.

SAWING THE PILES. These piles are then sawed off squarely under These piles are then sawed off squarely under water, at a depth of about six feet below low water mark. This is done by means of an ingenious machine contrived by Chief Engineer Partridge, and consists of a circular saw attached to an upright iron shaft, kept in position by a heavy and well braced framework and driven by a six-horse engine, the whole constructed on a flat boat and movable about, where ever wanted. This iron shaft can be lowered or ever wanted. This iron shaft can be lowered or raised to any desired point, and a belt which passes around the small drum through which runs the shaft, and around a larger one near the engine at the rear of the boat, drives this saw just as well below as above water, and cuts off the piles with great ease, making a level surface to receive the timbers. The piles are then secured in place by 14-inch square oak timbers, which are placed along on the rows of piles and secured by a long heavy bolt of iron driven through and deep into each pile. Across these are then laid a close flooring of 12-inch square oak timber, bolted down in the same manner to the bottom timbers. A frame work of the same size timber is then placed around the border of this floor and bolted down, forming a kind of square solid oak box on the top and 12 inches ust as well below as above water, and cuts off square solid oak box on the top and 12 inches deep. This is nearly filled with a concrete made of cement and rubble stone, and soon becomes as hard as a granite ledge. The stone foundation is then built upon this, and the pier is carried up to ten feet above high water mark, out of the reach of the highest floods ever known in this river.

WORKING UNDER WATER. When there is work to be done under water, a diver with a diving-bell and a complete paraphernalia for breathing purposes, goes down and works away for hours at a time. This man has been brought here from Annapolis, and with a boy attendant, does all the amphibious work, charging the company $20 per day for his ser-are all of cut sand stone, brought from Aquia Creek and Free Stone Point, and are quarried and sent here by contract. The distance be-tween these piers is 133 feet, and they will be finished by the 1st of October if tide and weather

The iron materials consisting of rods, angleblocks, caps, bolts, nuts, screws, braces, screw-bolts, of all patern and sizes, are on the ground ready for use. The heavy stringers and timber work for the bridges are being framed on the grounds beyond the old tavernon the Virginia side of the river. This timber is of the best quality of oak, and will be dressed up and painted with oil and lead. Nothing further needs to be done with for the present; it is built up nearly to the established grade, and the coping is to be added; also, a footwalk on the north side, which is to be constructed by cast-iron brackets projecting over the wall, which are secured to the stone coping. An iron railing will be outside of all.

The work on the north end of this bridge will scon be commenced, and the piers the entire length be above water before cold weather sets in. The estimated cost of this portion of the company's work is not much less than that of the tunnel. The contractors—Messrs. Campbell & Bro.—for cutting and grading the road to Alexandria have put on a force of laborers and teams at the Four-mile run grading. Mr. Partridge is chief engineer, Mr. G. W. Dorner resident engineer. Messrs. Fowler & Yarwood are the contractors for quarrying the blue and sand-stone for the bridge.

OUTSIDE OF THE DISTRICT

OUTSIDE OF THE DISTRICT the work is progressing finely. The track has been laid south of the Annapolis and Elkridge Railroad as far as the Little Patuxent, and north of that road about three miles. The bridge of that road about three miles. The bridge across Regue Harbor, a small stream running into the Patuxent, has been completed, and the cars have passed over. It consists of one span fifty-five feet in length. The bridge over the Little Patuxent—one span 180 feet in length—has just been finished, and the track laying is being pushed firward with the utmost dispatch to the Solomons we have Harper's Bazar for Aug. 5th,

Six miles of the track are already laid, and the prospect is more than fair than trains will be running to Mariboro by October and on the Washington Branch before Christmas.

The work on the Baltimore tunnel is progressing rapidly. Layers of rock have been encountered in one or two places along the route, but have been easily disposed of. When the dogs became exhausted they were caught up by their owners and tossed into the river to wash the blood off and revive them for a fresh attack.
